The entire crew celebrated the ship's first anniversary with a huge cake and an elaborate Sunday dinner.

Before its commissioning in San Diego a year ago, Parsons was converted to a guided missile destroyer. Its superstructure was almost entirely removed along with the 5 inch 54 caliber gun mounts, and replaced with the Tartar Missile System, antisubmarine rocket missile system, and an all new electronics system.

The ship is presently operating with the U. S. Seventh Fleet as flagship for Commander Destroyer Squadron 31.
