Gone Fishin'

The birds sing their songs,
as the sun warms my face;
the tranquil water is another world,
in my boat, I feel the Grace.

I cast my line, yet again,
and take a deep breath;
such a small world is this,
small, but the best.

Pine trees line the banks,
an oak tree here and there;
squirrels bark and run about,
in the foggy morning air.

When the fish are not biting,
I love it just the same;
I'm surrounded by serenity,
and lost from life's quick game.
